St. Priscilla—Feast day July 7th.

Who is Priscilla?

There are apparently three saints known as Priscilla, though between them the legends and details can be sketchy and confusing.

The first and best know St. Priscilla, one of the earliest of saints, is actually mentioned in the bible, not once, but several times. Her name sometimes appears as Prisca, but since she is always mentioned with her husband, Aquila, we can be sure it is her. She and her husband were friends of St. Paul.

Priscilla and Aquila first met Paul in Corinth, Greece. There were Jews who lived in Rome until emperor Claudius expelled the Jews from there in about 40 AD. Aquila was a native of a place called Pontus, in today's northern Turkey. Paul stayed with Priscilla and Aquila in Corinth because, like him, they were tentmakers. (Acts 18:1-3).

When Paul sailed from Syria, Priscilla and Aquila accompanied him. After a stop at the city of Ephesus, Paul continued on while Priscilla and Aquila remained in that city. In Ephesus, they met a man named Apollos, who had come from Alexandria, Egypt. Apollos was also teaching about Jesus, except, though earnest and well intentioned, he was not fully versed in the Good News. He knew about the baptism of John the Baptist but not about the baptism of the Holy Spirit. So Priscilla and Aquila instructed him more fully in “the Way”, which was what Christianity was called in those early days. Apollos went on to become a well-known and eloquent teacher of the Word. (Acts 18:18-28).

Priscilla and Aquila are mentioned in several of Paul's other letters. For example, in a letter to his friend Timothy, Paul asks Timothy to greet Priscilla and Aquila on his behalf. (2Tim 4:19).

Paul also mentions Priscilla and Aquila in his letter to the Romans. Again he asks that his own greeting be forwarded to them and to the church at their house. However, this time he mentions that they have played a far more important role than was previously told: that they had “risked their necks” for his life, thus preserving his ministry to the Gentiles. He does not say exactly what they did, but says he is grateful to them for whatever it was, and that the Gentiles (including us) must also be grateful for it. (Rom 16:3-5).

Another St. Priscilla, a martyr of Rome is listed on Catholic Online. She may have been the mother of a roman senator, St Prudens, and the wife of one Manius Acilius Glabrio, who was put to death probably because his wife was a Christian. Tradition has it that, like her namesake from Acts of the Apostles, her home was used for church activities, in this case, as a headquarters for Peter's work in Rome. To this day there is a catacomb beneath where she lived that is named after her.

A third century virgin martyr, St. Prisca, is also called Priscilla. Little is known about her except that it is believed she was martyred and buried in the catacomb of Priscilla. A Roman basilica on Aventine Hill in Italy is dedicated to her.

So in our prayers we can thank St(s) Priscilla, the patron Saint(s) of our parish, for work they did and the courage they had to keep Peter, Paul and other Christians active in proclaiming the Gospel of Jesus. We can also look to their example of working quietly in the background to further the cause of the Church, for while Sts. Peter and Paul receive most of the acclaim, God knows that they had Saints called Priscilla working quietly, courageously and effectively in important supporting roles and that ultimately, He Himself rewarded them with Sainthood, with the vision of His own glory in heaven.
